Mostly F's

If you answered mostly Fs, you are Edgy Elegance: In a grown-up way (we're not talking punk here), you mesh classic pieces with edgier details like unfinished hems, hardware (like spikes and zippers), leather and animal print. This style merges downtown cool with uptown class. Celebrities with an Edgy Elegance style include: Kate Moss, Ashley Simpson, Heidi Klum, Gwen Stefani and Poppy Delevingne.

You may have strongly been a mix of two styles. That's great! Don't let it confuse you. Very few people fit completely into one category. Simply take what you like from each and create your own unique style. It's the mix of pieces that makes your style personal as no one else will have a style quite like yours!

To add more personality and make your wardrobe totally you, adopt a signature look by incorporate a theme or piece with every look.

Examples:

Gwen Stefani is best known for her red lipstick.

Nikki Hilton is frequently wearing something with a cat on it.

Angelina Jolie wears black

Kim Kardashian shows her curves in body-con ensembles

Rosie Huntington-Whiteley is a girl on- the- go in skinny jeans

I once worked with a business coach that only wore shades of white

I wear my red high heels to all business events

What can you incorporate? A monogrammed necklace? A fabulous scarf? Elephants? Stunning nail art?

Try to select something that is not trend based so you don't have to switch out your "signature look" with every season! It has to be something you LOVE! Be consistent in wearing it and pretty soon, people will soon know you for it being your signature style!

Looking and feeling your best takes some work and is an intentional act. Gather more inspiration on Pinterest and start creating your own boards to help you understand your likes and dislikes. Pay attention to the elements that attract you. Cleanse your closet of anything that is definitely not "you" and as your budget allows, begin adding new pieces to your wardrobe. You'll soon build a well-edited wardrobe that is perfect for your signature look!
